The focal point of the weekend in the Upvalley is Carbondale Days, an annual event that attracted a large number of revelers to the Pioneer City Saturday.

Among the highlights was a parade Saturday afternoon. Crowds of spectators lined the streets to view the line of march.

Above, one of the many colorful floats in the parade is this one, sponsored by the Gentex Corporation, long an important part of industrial life of the Greater Carbondale area. The centerpiece is a replica of a helmet, one of the products for which the firm is best known.

At right, Don Phraner of Fairlawn, N.J., a member of one of the visiting troupes, the Salt Water Militia, shows off his musket for some of the young bystanders.

Staff Photos
by Butler